THE MONTH'S NEWS.

[FROM OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT.]

London, 31st December.

There is little news to chronicle—the Christmas testivities chiefly occupying people's attention, where they are not engaged in stock-taking. These stock-takings are useful as a means of ascertaining our position, and of marking the progress which we, as a mercantile community, have made during the past twelve months. There is something peculiarly interesting in the contemplation of the busy life which animates the great centres of British industry, and in recording the results of the operations of the various forces that are brought into play by the commercial enterprise of a country like ours. There are indications on every side that we live in prosperous times. In spite of numerous drawbacks, and what at one time appeared to be insurmountable difficulties, the trade and commerce of the country, regarded as a whole, have never for a moment crassed to make the most satisfactory headway. From the "Annual Statement of the Trade and Navigation of the United Kingdom with Foreign Countries and British Possessions," recently published by the Board of Trade, it appears that the value of the imports and exports of the United Kingdom, taken together, has increased by the enormous sum of £11,000,000 in the course of five years. For the year 1853 the figures were $445,521,400, representing an increase much greater than that of any previous year, and it is understood that the trade of 1864, the returns of which are not yet complete, has exceeded that of the previous year in quite as large a proportion. It is a remarkable fact that the quantity of foreign and colonial produce which passes through this country, en route for other places, has nearly doubled itself during the last five years, amounting now to upwards of fifty millions sterling per annum. This state of things, satisfactory, no doubt, so far as we are concerned, is attributed to the changes which the American was has produced in the cotton used on the continent is grown in American and exported in American vessels to the countries in which it was consumed. Now two-thirds of the cotton used on the continent i where there is another condemned criminal, strennous efforts are being made to save his life, and in consequence of a requisition having been presented, the Mayor has called a public meeting to sign a memorial to the Home Secretary, praying for a remission of the sentence passed upon the unhappy convict.—The news from America has had a most depressing effect upon the Confederates here, and well it may. Consider: Sherman, without appreciable interruption, has marched from one side of the State of Georgia to the other; he had reached the sea, and is said, but prematurely, as we think, to have captured Savannah. It is a great military feat in itself. It is a great political stroke, too. But this is not all. The only army which could have defended Georgia was sent away into Tennessee. Beauregard, if he formed the plan of campaign, must have hoped to draw Sherman after him. If not, his operation was without sense. He must have been and was thunderstruck when he heard that Sherman had taken advantage of the defenceless state of Georgia to push an army through its vitals. But it was too late to withdraw. Hood was absolutely useless on the Tennessee at Florence. It would have been useless for him to try and reach Sherman. Before him lay a great prize if he could seize it—Nashville. For this prize he made a great stroke. The Federals scattered about in Middle Tennessee had only just time to concentrate, and if Hood had won the combat at Franklin he might have seized Nashville. But he was beaten, and Thomas, the Federal commander, was able to concentrate his available forces. Hood, seeing this, should have retreated. But he lingered about in Middle Tennessee had only just time to concentrate, and if Hood had won the combat at Franklin he might have seized Nashville. But he was beaten, and Thomas, the Federal commander, was able to concentrate his available forces. Hood, seeing this, should have retreated. But he lingered about in Middle Tennessee and only just time to concentrate, and in Kentucky. Thomas saw the blunder, Confederates, and routed Hood. Thus the army which should have defended Georgia was wasted in Tennessee, and now, except the remains of Hood's force, there is no Confederate army between Thomas and the Gulf of Mexico. So Sherman was able to overrun Georgia, defend Tennessee, and break up the only Confederate army between the Savannah and the Mississippi. What the next steps will be we shall learn in a few days, but months will elapse before the effect of these Federal successes is fully felt, and it is to be feared that the moral and political effect within the Confederacy will be more serious than the military.—The Italian Government seem bent upon thoroughly reorganising its executive, and doing the best it can to put it into a thoroughly economical working order. It is stated that a decree will shortly be published, reorganising the administration of the Italian Wardepartments. The staff of officials is to be reduced, and considerable reductions are to be effected basides. It is stated that, by the friendly offices of the English and French Governments, the Cabinets of Vienna and Turin have been induced to consent to a reduction of armament. The difficulty was which should begin, and the mediation of the other Powers succeeded in finding a means of arrangement.—The Pope has addressed an encyclical letter to the Roman Catholic clergy. The discoveries of science, philosophy, and reason are scouted as unholy; and the progress of liberal opinions is decried as indication of the "latter days." Among the rest of the societies condemned as injurious are "Bible Societies."

demned as injurious are "Bible Societies."

Friday, 6th January, 1865.

Circumstances seem to indicate that the year 1865 will prove an eventful one. Noting the signs of the times, and the tendency of thought and inquiry, we obtain through these media such an insight into futurity as warrants us in anticipating with some degree of confidence the probable course of events during the ensuing twelve months. The present aspect of European affairs, though not very hopeful, is by no means discouraging. Governments and peoples are watching one another's movements, each ready to take advantage of whatever may turn up in its favour. A great struggle is in progress for balance of power, not in the diplomatic sense of the term, but in the popular. The contest is between despotism on the one hand and liberty on the other, and the problem is how to preserve the balance of power with the view of preventing any particular section of a community from overriding over the rest. In France, the democracy is held in the iron grasp of Napoleon III. The Emperor, conscious of his critical position, and yet unable to extricate himself, does the best he can do under the circumstances. He knows where the danger lies. He has not forgotten that the French people who made him Emperor can unmake him if so willed. Hence the enignizatical character of his policy which is to please the people and hold them in subjection by the same course of treatment. France, therefore, in the event of the Respector life being spared, is not likely to be the scene of much excite-

The Italiana have developed the following the following the following as the direction of Italian unity. Turning to Germany, we are met with a less encouraging state of things. Wrong cannot be committed with impunity either by nations or individuals, and it is therefore to be experted to the support of the protection of speeches of welcome. The factuous Encyclical letter of the Pone, to which we referred in our last, still continues to excite attention, and while the impotent and senile denunciations of the poor old man who issued it, are condemned, not only by members of other faiths, but by the great bulk of the Catholics in this and every other country, there are yet found journals bold enough to uphold it, on the very simple ground that because it is the Pope's, and because he is infallible, therefore it must be right. To such an argument of course no answer can be offered. The factuous Encyclical lette fallible, therefore it must be right. To such an argument of course no answer can be offered.

Saturday, 14th January.

The time for the opening of Parliament has now been officially fixed. It is neither the 2nd nor the 9th, but the 7th of February. It is an unusual thing to open Parliament on Tuesday, but, for once, procedent has gone for nothing. Nothing has been said about the attendance of the Queen in person, and we are informed that her Majesty will not open Parliament. Two significant facts have, however, occurred which lead to the inference that the Queen will at no distant day resume her place in public life. For three years no band of music has been allowed to play in the town of Windsor. On one occasion the officers of one of the regiments of Guards caused their band to play while they were dining. A policeman arrived and put an end to the entertainment, so far as the .. asic was concerned, acting on a general order from the Queen. The prohibition has been removed and music gladdens the streets and barrack squares of Windsor once more. For three years no ships of war saluted Osborne. That prohibition has also been removed. These are trifles, but, like the straw in the air, they show the set of the current.—The reductions in the army and navy estimates will probably fall short of £1,000,000, though much will depend upon the armsneenents made with the colonies, some of which will become nearly self-supporting. It is interesting to note the difference between our hancals statements and those of the French. Ours are as clear as it is possible for a balance-sheet to be. There is no mixing up one year with another, no prospective and retrospective budgets; no long accounts unsettled, no budget for 1867. In France they manage things differently. They deal there with a dozen budgets at once, and never know bow they stand. Of M. Fould's financial statement itself, however, we will speak presently, but whilst touching on monetary matters we may just say that the Bank of England has reduced its minimum rate of

The Conservative party are remarkably sanguine as to the results of the general election whenever it shall take place, and are looking to an early possession of the reus of power. The rank and file are everywhere stirring the country with an energy that speaks well for success. The belief is that the House and country are tired of the present Administration, and would welcome a change. Even now parties are closely balanced on a division. Had the Danish debate been differently managed it is pretty certain that the Government would have been defeated. Whenever the electoral struggle may come, the temper of the country renders it certain that the Conservative element will be considerably strengthened in the new House of Commons—in fact, the "wire-pullers" of the party calculate on obtaining a fair working majority. The present Ministry have no cry, and per of the country renders it certain that the Conservative element will be considerably strengthened in the new House of Commons—in fact, the "wire-pullers" of the party calculate on obtaining a fair working majority. The present Ministry have no cry, and dare not launch a new Reform Bill. It is held together only by the Premier's personal popularity, and inasmuch as Lord Palmerston is in reality a Conservative, that popularity has gone to augment the Conservative regime, if it only be that Lord Derby's friends may not forget how to carry on the business of the country. Then there are new men who would like to try their hands at state-craft. Sir Stafford Northcote, for instance, is said to aspire to Mr. Gladstone's office, vice Mr. Disraeli, who has a hankering for the Foreign seals. The party, besides, is not without several excellent candidates for the woolsack. Moreover, Lord Palmerston wants rest, and must feel content with having been Prime Minister at eighty without wishing to die in harness. If, however, Lord Palmerston is willing to retire, Lord Derby is not anxious to come in, and would prefer being left to translate the classic authors in peace. These can be no question that the Conservative chief requires to be urged on continually. The difficulty is that there is no one to replace him, for Mr. Disraeli would not be tolerated, and Lord Stanley, with all his ability, is unfitted for leadership, and is besides a little too advanced for his party. It was even suggested some time since that General Peelshould take Mr. Disraeli's place as leader of the Opposition in the Commons, but Lord Derby was too chivalrous to entertain the proposition. So whilst the general prospects of the Conservative Opposition look promising, there are certain conflicting elements within, which, if not reconciled before the day of victory, may render success of no avail, and leave power in the hands of the Whigs. There are conflicting reports as to whether the Gueen will open Parliament, but from all we can learn, the ceremony and will be greatly missed as a turf authority.

There is really little to write about but the weather, which is simply detestable. A slight covering of snow has fallen in the night, and this has been succeeded by rain, so that, with a temperature almost touching freezing point, the streets are in a frightful condition. Horses are slipping down in every direction, and boys and men are busily engaged in sweeping away the snow from the flagstones, just leaving a frozen lump here and there to trip up a heedless passenger. Frost may have its uses in the country, but in towns it is an undeniable nuisance. "Seasonable" weather in winter is always followed in London by an increased mortality, not merely amongst the old and infirm, but amongst those who might live for years if they had not been subjected to the vicissitudes of our climate. Increased mortality is, perhaps, not the greatest evil brought by the inclement weather. Anyone who is given occasionally to walking at a late hour in the streets of the metropolis will see at all times of the year a number of homeless wanderers, scantily clad, sleeping in any odd corners that they can find, where a door recedes a little from the footway, or a few projecting steps make an angle in the wall. On the benches in the Mall, on the seats in Hyde Park, there are generally a few sleepers to be found, and this by casual passers-by who make no business of hunting out the destitution in this great city. In the summer-time even, when the night air is soft and balmy, anyone who is given to thinking must experience a touch of sorrow as he passes by such outcasts, though, at such a time, the hardness of their bed is the chief cause of their sufferings. What must be their fate in such weather as this? The touch of winter's frosty fingers, welcomed by many as an exhibiarating pleasure, sends a shoot of deadly pain through many human creatures. The children of poverty who swander about the streets of London in the long and drivery January nights have to bear an accumulation of misery, showed that the streets were full of bewilderen propie and in the roadway you could hear the vehicles com-ing into constant collision. Accidents of course there were, but they were surprisingly few considering tha-for the time the whole population of the metropoli-was totally in the dark. Collisions on the river wer was ultimately on land. Several persons were drowned by walking into the docks and the river.—
There are many conflicting reports as to whether the Queen will open Parliament in person—in fact, latterly, the papers have been putting forth statements and counter-statements utterly at random. From all we can hear, however, Parliament will be opened by commission.—Mrs. Leech, it is said, it to have a pension on the Civil List. On Monday Captain Sherard Osborne read a paper before the Geographical Society on "Explorations in the Polar Regions." He pointed out that the dangers of polar expeditions were not so great as had been thought, and urged the expediency of another expedition to explore the region round the North Pole. He mand Captain McCintock as the most fitting to command the expedition, and said that the Admiralty would give two small vessels if they were asked. The Times strongly denounces the project.—The foreign news is a blank. The monarch by "Divine right," King William, and his familiar Herr Von Bismarck, are still at issue with the Prussian Caambers, and the breach seems likely to widen. Two remarkable Frenchmen are dead, viz., Prudhon and Coloned Charras. The former was a well-known Socialist writer, and the author of that precious work, La Propriete c'ast le vol. Colonel Charras was Under Secretary of War during the Cavaignac regime in 1849, and was an ardent Republican. He was one of those secized and expelled from France after the coup of ctot, and during his exile he published an elaborate history of the Waterloo campaign, wherein all the Napoleonic fallacies about the treachery of certain French gene-and during his exile he published an elaborate history of the Waterloo campaign, wherein all the Napoleonic fallacies about the treachery of certain French generals was thoroughly exploded. It is needless to add that a work ao anti-Bonapartist has never been allowed to circulate in France. Colonel Charms never accepted the amnesty accorded to himself in common with Generals Charngarnier and Lamoriciere, asserting that where no wrong had been committed no pardon could be granted.—The Bank rate of interest is reduced to 5 per cent.

—For some time past—we may say from the commencement of the war with Demmark—the German people have been in a state of political intoxication; and, as is the case with intoxicated people generally, they were elated with trifles which did not concern them while to their own individual interests they were altogether indifferent. This may be said of the Prussians especially. Before the subjects of King William had allowed their heads to be turned by the prospective glories that would accrue to fatherland from a war with Demmark, they were engaged heart and soul in a most noble struggle with their monarch and his evil genius, Bismarck, in the coase of constitutional liberty. The debates which took place in the Prussian House of Representatives previous to the war, were of a character sufficiently ominous to warn the King that there was a point beyond which he would not be allowed with his "Divine right" pretensions to proceed. The King, believing himself to be a divinely appointed ruler, sought, by the aid of an unscrupulous and designing minister, to maintain his supremacy in spite of every opposition, and at all hazards. The point upon which the contending parties agreed to try their strength had reference to the control to be exercised by the King over the army, the organisation of which his Majesty claimed as his prerogative, while the people, through their representatives supposed to the proper control to be carecised by the King over hearing the proper control to be carecised by the nequently reminded, and with regard to which "sentiments traditional in the memory of the actire country had been called forth." What could be more patriotic than such innguage as this, and what would have been better adapted to send the deputies. home dreaming of the honour and glory of schenkand? But his Majesty cannot hide his divine pretmasion for the lamp, it was very indiscreet of his Majesty to incur the danger of prematurely arousing the Opposition by alluding to this subject in language like the following:—After the experience of the war, in which the "existing organisation of the army" was found to work so well, the King observes:—"It is more than ever my duty as Sovereign to maintain the present arrangements, and to develope them upon the existing basis, so as to impart to them greater perfection." His Majesty expects that both Houses of Parliament will afford him "their constitutional assistance in accomplishing this duty." By re-electing Herr Grabow to be their President, the Chamber of Deputies have taken the List step towards the renewal of the conflict at the point where it broke off on the outbreak of the Danish war. Herr Grabow, in the course of his address on assuming the chair, spoke planily and decisively on the relations, as they at present exist, between the Chamber and the Government, remarking that, so far from an understanding having been arrived at, the Liberal party—including the Press, public functionaties, and private citizens—had been prosecuted by the Government. This language would seem to indicate that the attempt to silence public opinion by military successes has failed, and King William is once nore face to face with his subjects. Either he or they must give way. At present it is impossible to say to which side the balance inclines.

COLONIAL TRADE OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

(From the Europeen Times, January 11.)

THE names of the present possessions of the British Crown abroad are—In Europe, Heligoland, Channel Islands, Gibraltar, Malta, and Gazo; in Africa, British possessions on the River Gambia; Sierra Leone, British possessions on the River Gambia; Sierra Leone, Rritish possessions on the Gide Coast, Ascension, St. Ilelenz, possessions in South Africa, Cape of Good Hope, Kaffraria, Natal, and Mauritius; in Asia and Arabia, Aden and Kooria Mooria Islands; India, Bembay and Scinde, Madras, Bengal and Pegu, Sin-paper and Eastern Straits Settlements, Ceylon and Hongkong; in Australia, West Australia, South Australia, Victoria, New South Wales, Queensland, Tasmania, and New Zealand; in America, British North America, British Columbia and Vancouver's Island, Settlements of the Hudson's Bay Company, Newfoundland and Coast of Labrador, Canada, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and Cape Breton, Bermudas, British West India Islands, British Guiana, Belize (British Settlements in Honduras), and Falkland Islands.

The total amount of the imports from the British possessions into the United Kingdom in each of the last five years was as follows:

The exports to British possessions from the United Kingdom during the same five years were as follows:

The total value of the colonial trade, including both exports and imports, amounts to the following enoris steadily increasing both as relates to imports and exports.

Gibraltar, though chiefly a garrison, is also a place of considerable trade. The imports from Gibraltar are small, for the Rock scarcely produces anything, and in 1863 did not amount to more than £69,130. But the exports to Gibraltar are very large, that place being the entrepot for the principal trade with the coasts of Morocce and Spain. The exports to Gibraltar in 1863 amounted to £1,471,451, and had nearly doubled since 1859, when they did not amount to more than £795,759.

ialtar in 1863 amounted to £1,471,451, and had nearly doubled since 1859, when they did not amount to more than £795,739.

The trade with Malta and Gozo is also considerable, and they are entrepots for the trade with the interior of the Mediterranean. The imports from these two islands amounted in 1863 to £138,562, and the exports to £726,139. These are now the only European possessions of the British Crown beyond the limits of the British Islands.

Along the West Coast of Africa there is a considerable trade at several points. The British possessions on the River Gambia in 1863 supplied us with products of the value of £221,540. The British possessions on the Gold Coast supplied us with product worth £19, 288, and took British merchandise of the value of £101,563. The Island of Ascension, too, supplied produce worth £12, and took from us the value of £101,663. The Island of Ascension, too, supplied produce worth £12, and took from us the value of £101,663. The Island of Ascension, too, supplied produce worth £12, and took from us the value of £102,655, and took merchandise owrth £39,550.

The trade at the Cape of Good Hope itself supplied us in 1863, with produce of the value of £1,779,122; that of Kaffraria with produce of the value of £1,2681; and that of Natal with produce of the value of £1,263; and that of Natal with produce of the value of £1,263; and that of Natal of £308,217.

The Island of Mauritius—which we must consider as an African island, and which is now the most flourishing sugar colony possessed by England—in 1883 furnished us with produce of the value of £13,293; and that of Natal of £308,217.

The Island of Aden, on the coast of Arabia, is a military and naval position, and a coaling station for our Indian steamers, and is in both respects of the greatest value. But it is a mere rock, producing nothing: and the people around are too fierce and savage to be of any great use either as producers or consumers. But a trade is slowly growing up, which may become of some consequence as the surround been extraordinary, as will be seen from the following figures:—

1MFORTS FRON BRITISH INDIA.

1859 ... £16,244,869 | 1862 ... £34,133,551 |
1860 ... £1,06,697 | 1862 ... £34,133,551 |
1861 ... £1,968,752 |

The principal cause of the above increase is of course the great revolution in the cotton trade, by which British India is becoming the principal source of supply for cotton. By far the greatest increase is in the provinces of Bombay and Sciade, which are especially suited for the growth of cotton. During the last three years the value of the imports from the growinces of Bombay and Sciade, which are 1861, £11,334,630; 1862, £21,908,616; 1863, £30,284,041.

There has also been a considerable increase in the exports of British merchandise to India during the same period, though this has finctuated a good deal in the interval, chiefly owing to the rise in the price of

It was intended to introduce again the measure which this Hense had under consideration last session; he referred to the Criminal Law Consolidation Bill, which was passed almost entirely through the committee of the chamber, and was very carefully considered thore—in fact, the report of the committee was nearly ready to be brought my, with the exception of one or two final clauses. The labour expended upon that bill was of too important a nature for him to get it passed this session. He had no doubt that it would be sent down to the other chamber, and be passed into law by the present Parliament. There were various measures that the Coovernment proposed to get passed through the other chamber; some of those were now under consideration in that House, and would in due time come up to this Chamber, and would no doubt receive here the consideration in that House, and would in due time come up to this Chamber, and would no doubt receive here the consideration in that House, and would in the time come up to this Chamber, and would no doubt receive here the consideration in which they were entitled. Mr. WILSON asked the Secretary for Works, "What is the amount of retention money under Mr. Hughes's contract for building the bridge at Singleton?"

Mr. ARNOLD stated that the amount of percentage retained by the Government upon the works executed under the contract for building the bridge at Singleton was fitzed 9s. 1d.

Whether it is the intention of the Government to see that this branch of the public service is immediately placed in a state of greater efficiency.

Mr. SMART, in reply, quoted a communication from the Poetmaster-General, to the effect that the letters received from the country on the occasion of the delivery of the English letters. The country newspapers, on such occasions, were not taken out at the same time as the English letters. On the motion of Mr. SMART, the House resolved itself into Committee of Supply, to consider his Excellency's message submitting Supplementary Estimates for 1864, and Estimates for 1865.

Mr. SMART moved the following estimate for the Governor's establishment:—

Here was a difference of £54,000. Whatever benefits were to be expected from this coalition Government, it was evident that economy in the administration of public business was not to be one of them. Certainly for 1864 there was a supplementary appropriation amounting to £466,000, but the Treasurer knew that this included upwards of £200,000 for unauthorised expenditure, the previous Government not having hought it worth their while to ask the assent of Parliament for that expenditure, He believed that in some degree the increase

SEAMEN'S LAWS AMENDMENT BILL.

Clause 1—"Paragraph 4, section 99 of 27th Vie., No. 13, repealed." having been moved,

Mr. SMART said that he had listened to the suggestions of the bon. member for Patrick's Plains, that he should give some of the clauses of the original bill a fuller consideration before he repealed them. He had consulted with certain professional gentlemen, who were of opinion that the matter contained in the clause referred to were prevised for by the common law. Under these circumstances he should move the bill as it now stoot.

Mr. WILNOS and that, in proposing the amonalment he should move the bill as it now stoot.

Mr. WILNOS and that, in proposing the amonalment he should now the sweet of the should withdraw any opposition to its passing.

The clause was aspreed to; as was also clause 2. "Short Title of the Bill." The House resumed, the bill was reported without amondments, and the report was adopted.

The House went into committee for the further consideration of his bill.

therefore, that some amendment should be made in this clause.

Mr. DARVALL said this clause proposed to deal with persons who gave information to facilitate the commission of crime. Now the mere fact of giving food to a bush-ranger would not make the person supplying it an accessory to crime. But if he supplied the bushranger with facilities for escape, or supplied him with facilities for the commission of further crime, then he would be liable. If a person gave a night's lodging to a bushranger, and that bushranger, two days afterwards, committed a robbery, the person who gave him a night's lodging could not be charged as an accessory. He did not think, therefore, that his learned friend's objection had much weight.

Mr. MARTIN said, in order to embody his view he should move as an amendment the omission of the words "to facilitate the commission by him of further crime or." If there persons were going out with the intention to commit a mail robbery, and some person supplied them with a revolver must be held responsible. Or if a person supplied a revolver to a person for the purpose of assisting him in the commission of a particular crime, the person supplying the revolver must be held responsible.

Mr. DARVALL moved the introduction of the words "and knowingly" after the word "voluntarily." If a person "knowingly "harboured and sheltered an outlaw he should be visited by a very grave punishment.

The amendment was put and agreed to.

Mr. HART said it appeared to him that this clause was too stringent. They had a desire to put down bushranging, but they should be careful not to break through those rules which guided civilised communities. A person refusing to give information to the police would, under the bill, render himself liable to forfeit all his real and personal property; but it did not state what kind of information was to be given. He should support that provision for the punishment of those persons who gave false information, but he should dissent from the provision for punishing persons who withhel Altorney-General that the clause should be remodelled.

Mr. MARTIN moved the omission of the words "tending or," &c.

Mr. LEE said he was sorry to see a tendency to amend this clause so much. He believed that innocent persons would have but little fear under this clause, while it would bring to punishment the most criminal of the criminal class. He maintained that the clause as it stood now contemplated two kinds of offender—those who assisted criminals to escape from justice, and those who asisted criminals to escape from justice, and those who asisted criminals to commit crime by supplying them with horses, arms, &c. If a person voluntarily gave his horses to persons who he knew in a general way obtained their livelihood by robbery, he should be punished as well as the man who assisted a criminal to escape. When it was considered how difficult it would be to prove that the offence was committed "voluntarily and knowingly." he should suffer livelihood as well as the man who assisted a criminal to escape. When it was considered how difficult it would be to prove that the offence was committed "voluntarily and knowingly." he should suffer livelihood as well as the man who assisted a criminal to escape. When it was considered how difficult it would be to prove that the offence was committed "voluntarily and knowingly." he should suffer livelihood as well as the man who assisted a criminal to escape from justice which would not for crimina; and he could not imagine any kind of assistance which might be given to one of these outlaws for the purpose of enabling him to escape from justice which would not equally aid him in the commission of crime.

Mr. DARVALL said, that to establish the offence, you must prove not only that the thing was done, but also the intent with which it was done; either an intent to enable character of labour to the gaol authorities. He should vote for the omission of the words if the hon, member pressed his amendment.

Mr. DARVALL suggested that the hon, member for Patrick's Plains should substitute for his smendment the proposition to insert the words "or without," and the clause would read, "with or without hard labour." Then the Judge-looking at the strength of the prisoner, the nature of the offence, and a variety of other circumstances—might impose labour or not according as in his discretion seamed best.

Mr. WILSON withdrew his amendment.

Mr. DARVALL moved the insertion of the words " or without " after the word " with."

Mr. ARNOLD said that in consequence of the statement of the hon, member for Newcastle that hard labour was not provided in the gaols of the colony—though he supposed he intended the assertion to apply principally to the gaols in his own district—he hought if desirable to state what was actually the case. The hon, gentleman could not have visited Maithand gaol for some time past. There an additional wing had been under construction during the last two or three years. [Mr. HANNELL. "Hard labour."] and was not likely to be finished for some considerable time to come. (Heav, hear, and laughter.) It was not expected, nor did he know that it was desirable or possible under any circumstances that the same amount of labour could be got from prisoners as from free men.

Mr. HANNELL considered hard labour was a farce, and the period of punishment might be left to the discretion of the Judge.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HART moved the emission of the remaining words in the clause, "And no allegation or proof by the party so offending that he was at the time under compalisans shall be deemed a defence unless he shall as soon as possible afterwards have gone before a justice of the peace or some officer of the police force and then to the best of his shifty given full information respecting the accused person and declared voluntarity and fully the facts connected with such compulsion." His reason for doing so was because the clause has been somewhat altered by the insertion of the words, "and knowingly," so that the onus was thrown on the Crown of proving that the person harboured outlaws, therefore the remaining words were inconsistent.

Mr. DARVALL thought the hon, member could not have considered the effect of this clause. The latter part of the clause was put in in case a person set up the defence of compulsion, and then he would have to show that he did not wait till the day of trial but had come forward at once and stated that he was subject to this compulsion, He must oppose the amendment.

Clause 6. Justice or officer of police may search for sus-

Clause 6. Justice or causes by present at the prectod ficions.

Mr. DRIVER characterised this at a most objectionable clause, and he defied any one to point to any clause in any bill ever proposed of so monstrous a character. It struck at the liberty of every man in the country, and under it the police could do anything they pleased. He would do all he could to prevent its passing in its present share.

attrack at the lifecty of every man in the country, and under it the police could do anything they pleased. He would do all he could to prevent its passing in its present shape.

Mr. DARVALI, said the presumption was that the police would only do what was their duty. The question now was whether a less stringent law would fulfil the requirements of the case. Surely a police officer knewing an outlaw to be concealed in any house was not to wait about the premises in all weathers until it suited the cutlaw's convenience to come out, or to wait until he could get a warrant from a magistrate to enable him to enter. What hardship would there be if such a search did take place. It was only where there was reasonable ground for suspicion that the outlaw, or accused person, was concealed that a dwelling could be entered and searched. Under the law as if at present stood a constable could street a suspected felon, and this bill extended but ittle farther in enabling a police officer to enter any house where such a person was reasonably supposed to be concealed. After all this Act when passed would, he hoped, have only a short existence. It would be left imperfect if, when an outlaw was harboured or concealed in any house, authority be met given to the police to enter the house to effect his arrest.

Mr. MARTIN said, by this chause, even if a police officer did not find the felon, he might sieze all the people there. If we passed a law like this we should make bushrangers.

Mr. DARVALL said there was no fear for such alarm as appeared to be entertained by his learned friend. If there was reasonable ground to suppose the outlaw was in the house, why should he not have authority to arrest him, and why should he not be enabled to go into the house to do so. The great extension of the law had been made in the second clause, and it would be perfectly absent to depart from the direction therein taken by declaining against giving full authority for arresting persons suspected of felony. He (Mr. Darvall) explained that the meani

Mr. HANNELL said that the power of breaking into a house was only given to a justice or an officer of police, and consequently it was not given to the ordinary constable.

Mr. DRIVER insisted that every constable was an officer of police, and that consequently every constable would, under this clause, have the power to break ejen would, under this clause, have the power to break open deers.

Mr. CUMMINGS begged the Attorney-General not to pass this clause, as it placed too much power in the hands of the police, and they had already seen from circumstances that had occurred in the Western district, that those officers were not to be trusted with this power. They must remember also that all found in the house might be taken, whether male or female, at the caprice of a constable, and without the shadow of a charge against them.

Mr. HANNELL suggested that the Attorney-General should insect the words "Inspector or Sub-inspector" instead of "officer of the police force."

Mr. DRIVER objected to this, as all the outrages by the police in the interfor that had been complained of had been committed by either inspectors or sub-inspectors.

Mr. TIGHE thought the cause might be construed into meaning what the hon, member for Macquarie West had stated, and perhaps a verbal amendment would remove the difficulty.

Mr. LEE said that this was a special bill for a succial fliculty.

Mr. LEE said that this was a special bill for a special

Mr. LEE said that this was a special bill for a special purpose, and he did not believe that innocent persons would be likely to suffer from the operation of the carse. If they were innecent, nothing could be easier than to open the deer and give a reasonable explanation to the police. At the same time he would like to see a clear definition of what was meant by an officer of police, as he would not like to see every common constable armed with the power of breaking and entering a house.

Mr. DARVALL had no objection to confine the power to inspectors, sub-inspectors, and sergeants, as it would be necless if given only to inspectors and sub-inspectors, as they were not about so much as the sergeants. He was also willing to insert the word "thereupon" before the words "may seize," in order to make it quite clear that the persons are to be taken for harbouring only, in the event of the cutlaw being found in the house. He now proposed the insertion of the words "uniaw or" in the insertion of the words "outlaw or" in the twenty-fifth line, after the word "anchant agreed to.

Clause 7 [duration of Act].

Mr. DARVALL moved the omission of the words "three years," in the first line, and the insertion of the words "one year."

Motion put and agreed to Clause 8 [short title], and the schedule were omitted.

Mr. DARVALL moved the insertion of a new clause.

[Form of indictments under previous sections], to stand as the fifth clause of the Bill.

This clause was simply to simplify the proceedings.

Mr. DRIVER desired to know from the Attorney-General what information he would give a man charged with the commission of an offence under a previous section, and whether the accused would get any information without the usual form of commitment! What opportunity would an accused person have of preparing his defence. Under this bill and this clause a person might be caught one day, tried the next, and sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment, without even knowing what he was tried for.

Mr. DARVALL said the accused would first be brought prisonment, without even knowing what he was tried for.

Mr. DARVALL said the accused would first be brought before a Justice of the Peace upon sworn information. He would hear the evidence, and would know that he was accused of harbouring a certain outlaw, on a certain occasion. He thought that information would be quite sufficient. There was no necessity to go into further particulars.

A discussion that took place between Mr. DARVALL, Mr. DRIVER, and Mr. WALKER, respecting the form of the indiement,—Mr. DRIVER continuing to object to the wording of the clause.

The clause, as proposed, was subsequently put and passed.

The clause, as proposed, was subsequently put and passed.

Mr. DARVALL moved that the following new clause be inserted in the bill—to take place as clause 7.—

It shall be lawful after any such preclamation as aforesaid for any police officer or constable in the pursuit of any such outlies in the name of her Majesty to demand and take and use either absolutely or temporarily any horses arms saddles forage sustance equipments or any other property whatsoever required for the purposes of such pursuit. And if the owner of such protein purposes of such pursuit. And if the owner of such protein the purposes of such pursuit. And if the owner of such protein the purposes of such pursuit. And if the owner of such protein the purposes of such pursuit. And if the owner of such protein the maje to the compensation shall be under the compensation shall be property then the amount of such compensation shall be treated in an action to be brought by the claimant against the Colonial Treasurer. Provided that in all cases in which any such action shall be brought it shall be lawful for the Colonial Treasurer to plead in bur any tender previously made by him or to pay into Court such anoney as he shall think if and plead such payment in bar of the further maintenance of such action.

This clause was the result of a suggestion which had been mino tourt such money as he shall think it and plead such payment in har of the further maintenance of such action.

This clause was the result of a suggestion which had been made to him, and it was for the committee to consider whether the assistance proposed to be afterded was not a very valuable one. The clause was a sever one, but was one which would not, be thought, be objected to.

Mr. PIDDINGTON suggested it was desirable that the words "or any other property whatsevere" in the fifth time should be condited.

On the motion that the clause be read a second time.

Mr. BUCHANAN objected to the wording of this clause. It was se worded that the police might claim even a choque for money if they thought good to do so. The clause infringed the liberty of the subject to an unheard of degree, and would raise a storm of indignation in the interior of the country before six months were passed over. The result would be that the police would inflame to madness the minds of "the innecent inhabitants of the interior." He would exert himself to the utmost to oppose this clause, and to throw the bill out.

Mr. CUMMINGS did not take the same view of this ould exert himself to the utmost to oppose this clause, and throw the bill out.

Mr. CUMMINGS did not take the same view of this area as his hon. colleague. He thought it would prove to willingness of the inhabitants of the infested districts to estat the police, and in his opinion it did not infringe the gibts of the subject.

Mr. FORLONGE supported the clause.

Mr. PARKES said the clause was so crudely drawn to the could not understand it. Who was to fix the mount of the compensation, and who was to offer that impersation?

Mr. DARVALL said all those things would be matters compensation?

Mr. DARVALL said all those things would be matters of Executive arrangement.

Mr. LUCAS said he would vote for the clause.

Mr. RODD though the clause one of the most objectionable in the bill.

Mr. MACPHERSON said the proposition was by no means a new one. Twenty years ago the police took horsewhen they were required, and he never heard of any compensation being given. He could not understand how any objection could be raised against so reasonable a clause.

The clause was read a second time.

Mr. WILSON moved, as an amendment, the insertion of the words "at the opinon of the owner," He pointed out that some persons in the bush could not do without their hostes, and should have the option of saying whether they should be taken temporarily or not.

Mr. ARNOLD could not understand these small objections, and thought it was for more insufferable for the people in three districts to have the bushrangers than suffer any irrenvenience from doing without their horses. He had always found that the settlers were willing to give up their horses and arms, and do all they could to get rid of these men, and he pointed out in the Northern districts bushranging had been at once put down by the settlers.

Mr. MACPHERSON thought the hon, member misaprehranded the effect of the amendment, and he did not see any objection to the insertion of the words "at the option of the owner."

Mr. CUMMINGS thought if they gave the police any power, if should be given to them absolutely, with the hope of their soon catching the bushrangers.

Mr. DARVALL said. He had no objection to amend the clause, by striking out the words "either absolutely or temporarily."

Mr. WILSON withdrew his amendment, and the amendment that means the country of the part of the searched was carried.

Mr. DARVALL said. He had no objection to amend the clause, by striking out the words "either absolutely or temporarily."

Mr. W.H.SON withdrew his amendment, and the amendment proposed by Mr. Darvall was carried.

Mr. DARVALL neved that the word "amenunition" should be inserted, and the words "any other property whatsocver," be emitted.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEE moved the insertion of the words, "compensation for our property shall be offered to the party by the Government within three months"

Mr. LUCAS opposed the amendment.

Mr. JOSEPH did not think it was necessary for the Government to offer compensation, but it was quite time energh to make it when the claim was made.

Mr. ARNOLD thought the object of this clause was to enable the police to take the horses so as to prevent the bushrengers from revenging themselves on the settlers for assisting the police. He did not for a moment believe that any respectable settler would demand compensation for the use of his horce.

The amendment was negatived.

The clause was further amended by the omission of the words "value or."

Mr. DIGNAM expressed his approval of this clause, as

The clause was further amended by the omission of the words "value or."

Mr. DIGNAM expressed his approval of this clause, as the most essential clause of the bill. He believed the pelic would receive the greatest assistance in obtaining there facilities for their operations.

The clause, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. FARNELL pointed out that in one of the previous clauses, officers of police, although they might not be magistrates, were empowered to receive declarations. Surely this could not have been intended.

Cut the metion of Mr. DARVALL, a new clause was inserted as clause 9, to the effect that no conveyance or transfer of the lands or goods of a person accused under this bill be valid if made after warrant and before conviction.

this bill be valid if made after warrant and before conviction.

The following to stand as clause 10 was agreed to .—This Act shall be cited as "The Felons' Apprehension Act" and shall apply to all crimes committed and evidence taken and warrants issued and informations filed relating thereto as well before as after the passing of this Act.

This preamble having been agreed to, the bill was reported to the House, with amendments.

On the motion for the adoption of the report, an amendment was carried for the recommitted of the bill to amend clauses 4 and 8.

In committee, these clauses were verbally amended, and the bill being reported to the House, with further amendments, the report was adopted, and the bill being reported to the House, with further amendments, the report was adopted, and the hird reading was fixed for a later hour of the day.

The House, at a quarter before one, adjourned to three o'clock this day.

Mr. Obilivie took the usual oaths and his seat, and a quorum was formed.

The Schildton-General delivered a message from the Governor, referring to the Council to hear and determine whether the seats of the Hon. A. M'Arthur, P. L. S. Merwether, and W. Russell are vacant by reason of their absence.

The Schildton-General hid upon the table a number of papers, and on moving that they be printed stated briefly that the measure which he hoped the Council would perfect during the present session, and which had occupied much of their time, was the Criminal Laws Consolidation Bill; these were measures to facilitate the apprehension of bushranger—an Impeanding Bill, and one or two others before the other Chamber, which would probably also come up to them. The question of finance was one which had occupied the most serious attention of the Government, and measures would be proposed by the Celonial Tressurer to-meriow elsewhere for their adjustment.

Petitions were presented by Mr. Parkes, from the municipality of Kiama, praying for an amendment of the Municipalities Act; by the same hou, membe from Mr. A. F. The Semmen's Laws Amendment Bill passed through Committee, and the report was adopted.

Upon the motion of Mr. Danyall, the House went into Committee, nutther to consider the Felons Apprehension Bill.

The Committee resumed with the fourth chause of the bill, which purported to create as a new offence, that of harbouring or adding persons declared by processmation to be outliess. This chause gave rise to a very long delate, which lasted for several hours. The first objection which was pressed was made by Mr. Etchanan, who moved the omission of the words making it a penal offence to give aid, shelter, or sustenance to any outlaws. Mr. Danyall to pensal the amendment, on the ground that it was the primary duty of every one to cause a bushranger to be apprehended. The amendment was negatived by 41 to 2. Mr. Prinsicious moved an amendment, to omit as a penal offence the withholding of information concening any outlaw, but after some discussion the amendment was negatived by 32 to 17. Upon an amendment proposed by Mr. Dinyan, to omit the clause of toriciture of real and personal property of convicted felons, a long discussion arcse as to the necessity for a special clause of forfeiture, as to the prepricty of efforcing forfeiture of real estate as well as goods and chattels, and as to hardship of entailing rain upon innocent families by the confiscation of the whole property of offenders. The clause was justified by reference to the exceptional nature of the emactment, and the necessity for some stringent provision to extinguish and deter from the false sympathy with crime. Mr. Driver's amendment was negatived by 31 to 20. The clause as amended was adopted, on a division of 35 to 8.

If we were to pretend that the monetary statistics of this colony are satisfactory, our readers would point to our own tables and hold us to be confuted. At the same time we caution them against rash judgments drawn from the mere totals of either public accounts or monetary institutions. There is often an explanation behind, which would detract greatly or monetary institutions. There is often an explanation behind, which would detract greatly from the impression of mere numbers, for business embraces not only the figures which show themselves in balances, but the whole relations of commercial life and the connection of one sphere of financial operation with another, perhaps very distant, and affecting either favourably or otherwise their remotest ramifications. A new country not only draws to it people, but, as the uniform result of population, capital made by the labour of older lands. Not only those who settle, but still more those who co-operate in that settlement, and have commercial interests in view, furnish from resources already gathered, or by a credit able to sustain their engagements, the means by which colonies are pushed on from stage to stage. Indebtedness, therefore, from stage to stage. Indebtedness, therefore, is their normal and proper condition. They all owe more than they pay, not indeed by accumulating heavily the obligations of a single year's individual liabilities, but by that gradual expansion of enterprise which draws after it new capital and creates new bonds. The monied man of London, who reposes upon his enormous fortune, looks for better interest. his enormous fortune, looks for better interest than three per cent., and therefore becomes a than three per cent., and uncrease becomes a sharer in some banking concern. His money finds its way, either by gold or advance on goods, to the colonies. All he desires is the regular payment of his interest. To receive back the principal would avail him nothing. back the principal would avail aim nothing.

Safety — assurance, is all he requires to justify his continuance of the loan.

So strong is the spirit of confidence in new countries that the London market always teems with speculations embracing their wants and professing to support their cateruries. and professing to support their enterprises.

The capital realised by British industry, drawn from its successful commerce, has gone largely into foreign nations—to those who have the best as well as to those who have the worst credit in the world. The truth is, capitalists are rather a sanguine race, fond of something having a sanguine race, tond of sometiming naving a touch of venture—willing for one per cent. to place in jeopardy to ten times that sum the capital they advance. If, however, there is a manifest indisposition to pay—if the country borrowing loses its reputation for onesty-or if the affair ventured of a collapse, then the dread of total loss operates with magical force, and causes sucri-fices as much out of proportion to the actual probable success.

If we look at the indebtedness of a colony to ascertain the possibility of its monetary affairs keeping in their accustomed course, it is requisite to analyse the nature of the local engagements—to ascertain what proportion of those liabilities have been and are regular investments in which the power of the capitalist over his property differs nothing from the power of any colonial resident. All he can do is to dispose of his securities. It is not his interest to press them with wanton eagerness, but to take the opportunities of the market, and to uphold the credit on which his script is sustained. Although distant from the sphere to which he has confided his capital, he is as much concerned in maintaining the stability of commercial affairs, and presspating their relative relations. mercial affairs, and preventing their violent scillation, as if his house were in Melbourne or When we turn to the losses incurred during danger as the anticipations at first were to monetary crises in the colonies, we find that they have arisen chiefly from excessive imwn motives for the multiplication of goods. So long as this mistake is not made, there is a regular consumption of imports which will steadily reimburse the importer.

If, however, from some agitation in the money markets of England, a disposition is excited to venture on distant speculations—to raise imme-diate resources—and if goods are suddenly thrown into the market in extravagant superabundance, the whole system of trade is for the time paralysed, and the bankruptcies which follow are not so much losses incurred by the established and sober residents of the country, as by those whose capital is entirely of foreig origin, and who are the mere agents in the dis posal of unsaleable goods.

The advances of money on the stock and stations would probably be amply sustained by the confidence of capitalists w there not semething very unsatisfactory in the tenure of leaseholders. If anything is certain in reference to human industry it is that intelligent pasteral occupation will return a large profit to those who are engaged in it. If, however sales of property are made grossly in excess of value—if no tenure is assured to those who sell or those who purchase—if, in short, the rules of occupation be such as in private affairs would destroy the value of an estate and make its improvement an act of madness, we may indeed expect that, when ments contracted by purchasers of runs will be liable to violent disturbance and often to total failure. The great quantity of land taken up in the neighbouring colony for sheepwalks must have had its effect on our monetary system by creating bills, and thus raising loans which have to be met at fixed periods, and which are liable to all the accidents and surcharges of frequent renewal. The expectations in this quarter were always, perhaps, unwarranted by experience. But while many of the occupations are merely tentative, others have all the elements of certainty in their conditions, and all that will be requisite is for those who have the management of monetary affairs to discriminate between the sound and the unsound, and to give that time which must ever he necessary where the system proceeds originally upon a plan of extensive credit. We understand that, although some

We understand that, although some tightness has been suffered in our monetary affairs, current bills are met with considerable promptitude. We are not, indeed, assured altogether by this fact, because it frequently precedes as well as follows a monetary crisis. In the first instance the great obligations remain, and instance the great obligations remain, and those who have to contract them are mass scrupulous than ever in fulfilling their minor bargains and meeting their smaller bills. After a great monetary shock this promptitude is rather a matter of necessity from the diminished confidence in a mere signature. The storm has made and cleared away the wrecks, and the sailing is more cautious as well as more free. Bo far as our monetary difficulties arise from embarrassments in London, they have been less affected than would have the case had our neighbourhood been nearer. We are too remote to learn the difficulties and agitations of the London market at the time. Unless most severe, when they come to our knowledge they are almost past. We hear of enormous increase in the rate of the crisis is over. There are, indeed, times, and we must not expect to escape, when the indebtedness of a community become a real danger, and causes all its monetary arrangements to be shaken as by an earthquake. A panic is in such cases destruction. We are, however, warranted in hoping that the great monetary shocks of the world will not so far affect our in-terests as to deprive our institutions of their recources, or to disqualify them to meet extra-ordinary demands. When we compare the capital found by some of our monetary institutions with the discounts and issues, there seems to be a tremendous discrepancy, but at the same time we should never forget that well-established institutions, deriving their strength from distant sources, are less liable to lical convulsions. They can call in the aid they want at the time they need it, and thus redress the balance of their local credit. Against those ticmendous monetary convulsions which occa-sionally sweep over the nations we have no assurance. All we can do is to provide against events operating in our own immediate circle, and, at the same time, bear in mind that any and, at the same time, bear in mind that any year, perhaps any month, there may be developed in the commercial world the consequences of these latent operations which have placed the capital of multitudes at the mercy of foreigners, and exposed it to the vicissitudes of a terribl accession to office not merely by overhauling the books but by reviewing the systems of audit that have prevailed in the colony, and the analogy they bear to the English system. This review has been embodied in a memorandum on financial control and audit which Mr. COWPER has laid upon the table of the Assembly, and to which is appended observations and suggestions by Mr. RLNNE, whose minute and practical acquaintance with the working details of the Audit Office makes him an excellent authority

The changes effected by Mr. EAGAR not having been initiated so suariter in mode as they might have been were complicated with personal quarrels between himself and the Auditor. These may now drop out of sight. We have a new Auditor and a new Treasurer, and the proper system to be estab-ished may be discussed without reference to who has done right or who has done wrong in times that are past.

At the time Mr. EAGAR took office the public had been a little shocked by the discovery that the Treasury books did not disclose the actual state of the finance on any particular day, and that the account-keeping was distri-buted between the bank and the Audit Office. Mr. FAGAR's alterations, therefore, were effected with a view to such an arrangement of the book-keeping as should secure a prompt record in the Treasury of every item of income and expenditure, so that it should not be necessary to go out of the office to secure information on either of these points. The question is now raised whether his alteration has not lost sight of another point still more important, viz., the oversight on the action of the Treasury depart-

In his memorandum Mr. ROLLESTON points In his memorandum Mr. ROLLE-TON points cut that the essential principle of the English system has been a constitutional jealousy of the Treasury, and that this principle has been admitted by statesmen who have held opposite opinions as to details. He points out that, under Mr. Eagan's plan, this check on the Treasury is removed.

When responsible government was introduced it was clearly pointed out by Mr. Deas Thomson that the position of the AUDITOR-GENERAL was undergoing a great change. From being the financial officer of the Government, he was becoming the supervisor of that officer. He proposed, therefore, to make his position independent, held for life on good behaviour, and entirely non-political. Mr. DONALDSON and entirely non-political. Mr. Donaldson proposed to carry out this idea, but nothing that was proposed at that time was acceptable. The recent squabbles, however, about the public accounts, and the charges and counter-charges made by successive Treasurers have tended. have tended to convince the public that the accounts ought not to be disputable, and that Parliament ought at any moment to be able to extract from the AUDITOR-GENERAL a true and precise statement on any matter relating to moone or expenditure, or balances in hand, or labilities. But to do this the Auditor must be the direct servant of the Parliament, and must be so independent in his position as not to fear any Ministry.

to fear any Ministry.

Before, however, anything can be done to place the Audit Office on a permanently satisfactory footing, it is necessary that Parliament should distinctly define what are the recise duties it desires the Auditor to fulfil, As long as there is any ambiguity as to what an audit means there will always be disputes as to whether the audit is properly managed.

What is it then that Parliament understands by an audit of the public accounts? Is it a process of revision, or is it a process of super-vision? Is it meant to be a check upon improper payments, or merely a method of discovering when such payments have been made? tovering when such payments have been made reactions to intercept financial wrong-doing, or is he merely to report upon it? Is the audit to be before payment or after payment? Is the service to be preventive or detective? It is necessary to determine this point with precision because upon the kind of point with precision, because upon the kind of service expected from the Audit Office will depend the construction of the official machinery recessary to secure the end.

The duty of auditing is familiar enough to the public in connection with joint-stock associations. Every company has its accounts audited every half-year. But the auditors in these cases do not sit in judgment upon the these cases do not sit in judgment upon the propriety of expenditure or upon the authority that justified it. They confine their view to facts. They look to see whether the vouchers correspond with the entries, and whether the balances that ought to exist do exist. This is purely a work of revision, and it cannot take place till the facts it revises have been transacted. If we carry out the Government audit in this way some time must nave been transacted. If we carry out the Government audit in this way some time must clapse before any error or misappropriation of money can be detected or reported on. The interest in the affair may have passed away, the Minister may have resigned; responsibility becomes a myth; and if impunity is seen to follow wrong-doing there is likely to be wrong-doing in plenty.

For this reason a Government audit has been generally considered to be a different thing from a commercial audit. Its object has been to place the Finance Minister under inspection and consider the finance of the constant of the const and control so far as concerns the exp of the money authorised by Parliament. Ye practically this idea has not been fully realised and the auditing has been a hybrid sort of arrangement between revision and supervision partaking of the nature of both, yet not exclu

If no money can be paid away without the Auditor's sanction to see that it accords both in amount and in purpose with the Parliamentary authority, each department must dance attendance on the Auditor to get the necessary sanction. This involves expense and delay. As a remedy to this a local audit has been sometimes adopted, that is, there is an audit clerk attached to each department. This is the system adopted in the War and Admiralty Depart nents in England, and which Captain Martin-Dale, following military precedent, wished to introduce into the railway department here, The objection to it is stated to be that the officers in question come to regard themselves as officers of the departments they are appointed to check, and that being appealed to as to the expediency of certain courses they become ad-visers prior to being critics, and thus come to sit in judgment on their own recommendations

Mr. Rel LESTON quotes Mr. GLADSTONE as an authority in favour of the opinion that the con-trol of the issues should rest with the Audit however, preferring that this power should vest in the Comptroller of the Exchequer. They all agree in the opinion that such a control should exist somewhere. The audits of the neighbourexist somewhere. The audits of the neighbour-ing colonies recognise a similar principle. The question is, is it a right principle? Is the Auditor to be put in a position to refuse a pay-ment as unauthorised though the TREASURES may order it? If so, his duties must be defined by statute, and his position must be made inde-

Fineral of the late Mr. William Elyand, Principal Under-Secretary, were yesterday morning interred in the family vault in St. Peter's churchyard, Cook's River. The funeral was one of the largest that has ever been seen in Sydney; the cortege of coaches extended the entire length of William-street; the members of the Civil Service, of all ranks, and many other influential colonists being desirous of showing the respect they entertained for the deceased gendleman—the oldest Government officer in the colony. Amongst those present at the funeral were:—Lord John Taylour, the Colonial Secretary, the Colonial Treasurer, and the Solicitor-General (the other Ministers being prevented from attending by urgent public business); the late Colonial Secretary, all the under-secretaries, and the heads of Government departments, and a large number of the subordinate officers, including all the clerks in the Celonial Secretary's office; the Chairmun of Committees, and officers of the Legislative Council; the Speaker, and several members of the Itegislative Assembly, and several ministers of various religious denominations. A large number of the shops along the line of funeral were clesct. The impressive burial service was read by the Rev. George King; St. Peter's Church being silled with mourmers. The late Mr. Flyard, whose father was at one time a surgeon in the Royal Navy, and afterwards for many years a resident in Sydney, entered the Government service on the 6th February, 1822, as a junior clerk in the Colonial Secretary's office. From that position he gradually worked up to the post of chief clerk. Upon the introduction of responsible Government in 1850h was appointed Under Secretary to the Colonial Secretary, or Principal Under Secretary as the appointment is designated, and filled that office until within three weeks of his death, which took place on Monday last. Mr. Elyard's performance of his official duties was distinguished by extreme regularity, assiduity, and conscienticusness. During the long period of forty-three YOUNG MAN'S PRESENTERIAN INSTITUTE.—The YOUNG MAN'S PRESENTERIAN INSTITUTE.—The fortuightly meeting of the members of this association was held last night, in the Presbyterian Church, Macquaric-street. There was a numerous attendance. Mr. J. G. Reid occupied the chair. Mr. James Anderson read an essay from the pen of Mr. Hossack, "Wilberforce" being the subject of the paper. There were about thirty gentlemen present. Mr. O'Dowd presided. The secretary read a letter from the Newcastle branch, enclosing the names and subscriptions of sixty new members; and he also read a communication from John Martin, who forwarded the first half of the yearly report of the League. The document made special and gratifying mention of the New South Wales Branch. It was determined that the rooms of the League should be opened until ten o'clock at night for the accommodation of members. BURG: AEY.—Our Parramatta correspondent writes, Wednesday 22nd:—The shop of Mr. W. Drew, on the Western Road, was forcibly entered last night. Entrance was first effected by breaking a pane of the shop window, through which a boy must have been passed, the front door being then opened from the inside. A shawl, plaid jumper, six shillings in silver, three pounds of butter, and four loaves of bread were taken; although a quantity of goods was removed to the front verandah and left there, the pifferes either finding them too weighty, or being interrupted in their work.

The weather, being very favourable, a large assembly gathered to witness it. A special form of service had been prepared for the occasion, consisting of the 132nd Psalm, with a lesson from the Bible, an arrangement of collects and responses, and including two beautiful hymns. After the Psalm had been chanted, the Rev. Themas Wilson, B.A., of Kiama, read the lesson (1, Cor. iii., to verse 18), the Rev. J. C. Corlette, M.A., then read the scroll to be deposited beneath the stone, and after sealing it up in a glass vessel and delivering it to the builder to be laid in the recess prepared for it, he laid the stone with the usual formalities. After the second hymn was sung at the conclusion of the address, and during its singing a collection was made, after which the blessing from the communion office ended the ceremony. The amount collected was $12.5s. 6d., making the total of cash in hand $256 15s., besides which there are sums promised to the amount of over $5000. It is estimated that the entire demonstration of the amount of over $5000. It is estimated that the entire amount of over $5000.

smount of over £500. It is estimated that the entire cost of the building, so far as it is at present contemplated to complete it before used for divine service, will be about £1000. The plan consists of a nave and chancel, with a porch at the north-west corner of the nave, and a vestry on the south side of the chancel; but only the two former are as yet contracted for. Several special gifts towards beautifying the interior have been kindly promised.

The Season.—Last Monday, the cloud-covered sky and heavy atmosphere betokened coming change, and between nine and ten o'clock in the evening the so much desired rain began to descend in showers, increasing as the night grew on, until about 1 a.m. on Tuesday morning, when we were visited by a thunderstorm in conjunction with the down-pour. The rain lasted well on into the morning, and has had a very teneficial effect, although, from the basked condition of the roil, much more would have been welcome, both

The amount paid over to him by the plaintiff was £6419. The sum in dispute was, therefore, £2353. The decision come to by the arbitrators has been that Mr. Brauchamp be paid £307 18s. 3d.

The Reffix Morean again. Salurday's Wagga Wegga Express says.—Intelligence reached town at the commencement of the week that Morgan had paid a visit to Mr. Rand's station at Mohonga, some days previously. According to the account furnished, Morgan appears to have ridden up at evening to the superintendent, and accosted him with a remark to the effect that that —— wretch Morgan was not caught yet, to which the superintendent, probably forming some idea at the moment of who it was he had to deal with, replied, "Oh, he's a good sort of fellow enough if you let him slone," or words to that effect. Morgan appears then, without further remark, to have gone to the homestead, and, appearing in his true character, to have at once demanded if there was any one about the place who could play some music, and hearing that one of the men could do so on a concertina ordered him to strike up, at the same time requesting Mr. Rand to favour him with a little dancing, as he understood he could do something in that line. Mr. Rand to favour him with a little dancing, as he understood he could do something in that line. Mr. Rand had to examply with the ridiculous request, and, after the execution of various steps, was allowed by Morgan to retire to bed about midnight, the bushrenger stopping an hour or two later, and taking a herse, saddle, and a gun when he left.

Latert prom Elemontly.—From a gentleman who left Eurongilly on Thursday last we have obtained some reliable information of the posture of affairs on that field at that time. The population numbered about one thousand. There were two public-houses and a few stores up, and many more were half-built, but the owners were "holding-on" for a time, not liking the prospects of the place. Seven shafts, altogether, were getting gold: the best was getting about an ounce to the load, whilst the rest only averaged from twelve to fourteen pennyweights. One deep shaft was then going down; it was 160 feet, and not bottomed. The quartz in the "leaders" was secoking remarkably well, and, though expectations were high as to the certainty of a reer existing, none had up to that time been struck. Another hill was being prospected for a reef, but had not then met with one. A gentleman from Adelong had promised to bring a quartz-crushing machine on the ground if the miners would guarantee him 1500 tons of stone. The township, or, at least, the half-built apolecy for one, looked very dull and miscrable, and business men included in gloomy fereboding.—Bureragong Acque, March 185.

Hall And this Gane at Museum grant and Woman China, and Woman Chinaman Shot. Reliable information has just reached us, that Hall, Gilbert, Dunn, and Clarke were at Murrumburrah this morning (17th March). We believe they drove a mob of horses into a stock-yard there. They selected some of those which suited them best, and then rode of with them. At about twelve o'clock they made their appearance at Currawang. There they stuck up Mr. J. Roberts in his paddock. They asked him how many horses he had in his stable, but did not further interfere with that guntleman, neither did they take anything from his place. Between two and three o'clock they visited Little Wombat, and stuck un owne China were in his paddock. They asked him how many horses he had in his stable, but did not further interfere with that gentleman, neither did they take anything from his place. Between two and three o'clock they visited Little Wombat, and stuck-up some Chinamen. They tock some money from one of them, but we have been unable to learn the amount. One Chinaman was shet, the ball passing through the fleshy part of the thigh, inflicting a very severe wound. A well-known Chinese interpreter told our informant at Wombat that there were three mounted men, and that one of them was a young short fellow. "You know that fellow," he continued: "he used to be at Wellman's," thus leaving no dorbt of the identity of Dunn. On this eccasion, there were only three of the bush-nargers, whilst, if we were rightly informed, there were four at Murrumburrah in the morning. Clarke is a secundirel who has long been wanted. He used to carry on a very hurrative business in cattle-duffing at Kiandra, and had to leave that place rather suddenly in consequence.—Burrangong Argus, March 18.

MININO NEWS.—Writing on the 8th instant, from Inon Barks, the Western Examine's correspondent says:—There is very little doing in the alluvial diggings. A few parties seem steadily persevering on the White Hills, Little Iron Barks. Several have left this place during the last fortnight for Mudgee. Some of the claims in the quartz reefs have yielded fair returns; one claim on the "Poor Man's," where the returns's cine claim on the poor man's," where the reef crosses the head of Poor Man's Gully, sixty-tons quartz yielded about $2 ox. of gold. And the Frenchman's claim on the Poot Office Reef crushed eighteen tons, which yielded 2 ox. per ton. The majority of the diggers are without funds, owing to the poor nature of this gold-Seld, and they are obliged to turn their attention to something else.

The Season is New England.—The weather during the week appears to indicate the commencement of rather a severe drought. There are frequently threatening appearances of rain,

On Thursday, the 26th of January, a large party of children of both sexes was assembled, by invitation, at the Government House at Porte-de-France, Madame Guillain (the Governor's lady) had there invited the children of the settlers and of the persons employed by the Government to be present. The party consisted of forty-six little girls and twenty-two boys, of different nationality, colour, and religion.
Two half-caste children (orphans), recently received by the Government, rendered themselves remarkable by their refined and agreeable appearance. Toys, books, and cakes were presented to the young people, in the spacious verandah, and solviously gave them all intense satisfaction. One of the elder boys, in the name of the rest, returned thanks to Madame Guillain for her considerate kindness.

The comet was seen at Porte-de-France on the 22nd of January last, at sunset. It was more clearly nights of the 24th, 25th, and 26th, observations were taken respecting it with the theedolite. It was not observed after the 26th, in consequence of the cloudy state of the weather. M. Adam Kulezychi, the director of the Porte-de-France Observatory, reports that on the 26th of January the comet was situated near the star Alpha, in the constellation called by the French La Grue. At eight in the evening its right ascension was 321:36'36', and its southcastern declination 45'17'28''.

Bankerns
The City Bank.

The object of this Company is to establish within the Western District of New South Wales a Joint Stock Bank, which will afford to its inhabitants the advantages of an in-

The Commercial Bank, with a capital of £400,000, pays 17 per cent dividend, and has created a reserve fund of £104,000.

The Australian Joint Stock Bank, with a capital of £600,000, pays 12½ per cent. dividend, and has created a reserve fund of £50,000.

The course of banking in England shows that there is no need for the metropolis to monopolise the entire control of monetary affairs, many of the Joint Stock Banks in the manufacturing and country districts being among the most successful of these institutions. It requires no argument to prove that a local board must be in a better position to judge of the value of business offered to it than a directory at a distance, which, from various causes unconnected with the locality, may, without warning, cripple the truste of a district, and peril the standing of mon in every way worthy of wredit and support.

From the arknowledged wealth and vast resources of the Western District of New South Wales, it is believed that the company now projected will at once meet with sufficient local support to render its operations amply remunerative. Besides this, in addition to its immediate prospects, it may sairly be anticipated that the extension of the railway to Bathurst, and thence possibly to Fort Bourke, will give an impetua to pastoral, agricultural, and mining pursuits of great promise as regards the future extension of the bank, and will ensure to it a success second to none.

For the convenience of small investors the shares have been fixed at the moderate sum of £5 each.

The nominal capital of the bank is fixed at a quarter of a million sterling, in 50,000 shares; but it is preposed to issue to resource the sum of the bank and when the second control. Payment of calls to be made in the following instalments.

One Pound per Share on allotment, and the historial interests of the district, and to render every possible accommodation to the squatter, farmer, storekeeper, and miner.

The undersigned having been appointed Sole Agents in These waters can also be effectively used by persons in good health—their use often prevents uncaniness of the stomach—especially after meals.

FREE TRADE AND PROTECTION

A littrik before the meeting of Parliament, as is his wont, Mr. Milner Gibson has made his annual speech to his constituents at Ashton-under-Lyne. His experience seems to warm him against those autumnid exhibitions of eloquence which find so much favour aming Tory country gentlemen and the lesser luminaries of all parties. Possibly he does not wish to attract an undue share of notice for himself during the year, and, modestly content with the notoriety and distinction which he has carned for himself during the session, is willing to make way for those who have not enjoyed similar occasions for presenting themselves. Be that as it may, we always bail his appearance in the capacity of a member descending upon his borough in a cloud of smiles and tair works with a certain sert of languid pleasure. He is the marning star of the coming Session, and if he does not dazzle us hy his splendour, he is sure, at any rate, to shed round him a mild and not unpleasing light. If any one looks for sharp controversy and telling personal hits, for expressions that become the watchword of party, and epigrams that sting if they do not convince, he must not expect them from the President of the Boand of Trade. His tone is not controversial; it is rather, we should say, pleasantly didactive; he picks out a few topics the most likely to interest his audience, and has something to say on each of them which will offiend nobody, and will probably, on the whole, give pleasure to all whom he wishes to picase. He does not soar into the heights, nor dive into the depths, but sustains himself between the two with a steady, equable flight. He is very round and smooth—pleasing upon the whole to touch, but very difficult to grasp timily. No doubt he speakfrom the burning depths of a deep conviction, but he fails to impress upon his audience a conviction, but he is so kind, so courteous, and so reasonable, that he fails to impress upon his midmence a conviction, but he is so kind, so courteous, and so reasonable, that he fails to impress on the c are reaping, in the introduction of the term "reciprocity" into the dialect of professed Freetraders, some of the evil seed that we sowed when we returned to the old system of Treaties of Commerce. The growth of commercial liberality has its natural development just as any plant or any animal.

The first and worst state is Prohibition.
After a while the common sense of mankind rebels against total exclusion, and substitutes for it the After a while the common sense of mankind rebels against total exclusion, and substitutes for it the admission of forcign goods so carefully guarded as not to interfere with domestic industry, let it be as idle or as clumsy as it pleases. That is an era of Protection. Next comes the period when people, becoming more alive to the absurdity of throwing artificial impediments in the way of those who only desire to supply our wants but not yet having realised the truth that all exportation is only for the sake of importation, become willing to give freer access to the commodities of forcign countries, provided only they will receive our exports on corresponding terms. This stage of opinion, founded on a fallacy, but a much less odious fallacy than its two predecessors, is Reciprocity. Last of all comes the opinion which we have reached in England, if we can only maintain it against our Freetrade statesmen, when people come to see that all exportation is only valuable to a country as affording the means of importation, and that to refuse to import from countries which do not choose to take our exports is a step quite inconsistent with the true doctrines of Free Exchange. We have gained great things by the French treaty, but we shall almost be disposed to regret our success if the price we are to pay for it shall be the abandonment of the true doctrines of Free Trade, of which we have hitherto been the successful missionaries by precept and example, and the retrogression to a state of things which admits

Mr. Gibson treats the Malt-Tax as a question for the Chanelor of the Exchequer, contenting himself with pointing out that malt is less heavily taxed than tea of coffee. He demonaces the alliance between the Tories and the Roman Catholics, without, we think, taking sufficient note of the recent Encyclical Letter, for it has now gone forth, as matter too plain for dispute, that the only fault the Roman Catholics, that they are far too liberal for their allies. The very highest authority has declared that all which is comprehended under the modern idea of progress, the very doctrine of non-intervention to which we look as the likeliest means of securing peace, is not only contrary to the interests, but absolutely irreconcilable with the ereed and doctrine, of the Church of Rome; and that any Catholic who henceforth thinks at to centeratin these doctrines on must, on the authority of the infallible head of his Church, choose between his political and his religious faith, since the one denounces peremptorally what the other demands. The day of compromise is over; theology has swallowed up politics, and the infalliblity of Rome embraces all things, profune as well as sacred, secular as well as accelenisation. Not himpely because of the safe, and all parties interested in the lands to be affected by the said intended railway, are hereby required to remain the demands. The day of compromise is over; theology has swallowed up politics, and the infalliblity of Rome embraces all things, profune as well as sacred, secular as well as accelenisation. FRAMPTON'S PILL OF HEALTH.—This excellent Family Pill is a medicine of long-tried efficacy for purifying the blood, so very essential for the foundation of good health, and correcting all disorders of the stomach and lowels. Two or three doses will convince the afflicted of its salutary effects. The stomach will speedily regain its strength, a healthy action of the liver, bowels, and kidneys will rapidly take place; and renewed health will be the quick result of taking this medicine, according to the directions accompanying each box.

Persons of full habit, who are subject to headachs, giddiness, drowsiness, and singing in the ears, arising from too great a flow of blood to the head, should never be without them, as many dangerous symptoms will be entirely carried of by their timely use.

For females, these pills are truly excellent, removing all obstructions, the distressing headache so very prevalent with the sex, depression of spirits, dullness of sight, nervous affections, blotchess, pimples, and sallowness of the skin, and gives healthy, juvenile bloom to the complexion.

To nothers they are confidently recommended as the best medicine that can be taken, and for children of all ages they are unequalled.

These pills unite the recommendation of a mild operation with the next successful effect; and for cledry people, or where an excessional aperient is required, nothing can be better adapted.

Her Majesty's Commissioners have authorised the name.

CAUTION.—CHLORODYNE.—IN CHANCERY.—
Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood stated that Dr.
Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne, that the statements of the defendant Freeman were deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say that they had been sworn to. Eminent hospital physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, July 13, 1864.
The public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than Br. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

The public, therefore, are cautoned against using any other than Br. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORO DYNE.

FEVERS, DYSENTERY, DIARRHŒA, Consumption, Cougha, Asthma, Brunchitis, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, &c.—The safest and best remedy is that marvellous one known as CHLORODYNE, which was discovered by Dr. J. Cellis Browne, M.R.C.S.L. (Bs-Army Medical Staff), and the secret of the recipe confided only to J. T. DAWEN-POET, pharmaceutical chemist, 33, Great Russell-street, Bleomsbury-square, who is the sole manufacturer. Medical testimony furnished by the highest authorities in military, naval, and civil practice, and the numerous gratifying statements from the public generally, establishes this modicine as invaluable. It relieves pain, soothes the system, inducing refreshing and soothing sleep, without producing roleaving any unpleasant effects like optum, and may be taken at any time in a few drop doces.

None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Cellis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the wrapper.
